Dear Mr. Cohen:

Thank you for sending me the InterAction Council statement on global issues, and for your interest in my personal views.

I applaud the Council's efforts to promote a dialogue on global issues among political and religious leaders of varying traditions. I share the Council's view that in this nuclear era mankind is confronted with grave challenges and decisions.

At the same time, I would point out that there are positive developments occurring all around us -- developments which offer heartening signs of a new and more hopeful future for mankind. Foremost among these developments is the resurgence of democracy and the demand for political openness. Around the globe we see a powerful impulse toward democratic institutions and values. In my opinion, this global trend toward democracy is mankind's best hope for attaining a peaceful, free, and prosperous world community.

Once again, thank you for your interest in my thoughts, and good luck with your work.

Dear Armand:

Thank you for your recent letter containing ideas for a solution to the Afghanistan problem and also for the report of your travels to Moscow, Kabul, and Islamabad. It is unfortunate that Mr. Gorbachev offered no breakthroughs on the Afghanistan question at the Summit. I would welcome your insight into his current thinking based on your discussions with him during the Summit.

I agree with you that the situation has reached a crucial point at which a political solution may be possible. I believe that Mr. Gorbachev is in a position to take the necessary steps to bring about a settlement, but it is up to him to take these steps and present a realistic timetable at the next Geneva round.

We are unsure just how much the Soviet signals reflect a serious interest in moving forward quickly toward an Afghanistan solution and to what extent they are merely "public relations." Whatever the case, we will continue to impress on Moscow the fact that Soviet actions in Afghanistan will continue to figure importantly in our relations. If Moscow seriously commits itself to reaching a settlement, we are prepared to be helpful.

1988 could be a good year for the Afghan people. All it would take is a Soviet commitment to match their words with deeds. Anything you can do to encourage the Soviets in this direction would be welcome.

Dear Harold:

Thank you for your kind note following my address at the fundraising dinner for Dave Durenberger.

Frankly, I think my performance was not quite up to snuff. The week had been long, the flight delayed, and so many spurious telephone calls put me off my usual rhythm.

I'm pleased to hear of your support for the INF Treaty, and I heartily agree with you that the United States must always be powerful and alert. The President's determination to keep our defenses and our alliances strong was the key to this treaty, and he will continue to act and decide in that spirit.

Please do not hesitate to call me when you are next in Washington and perhaps a visit can be arranged.

Dear John:

Thank you for your letter concerning the Treasury regulations relating to R&D expense allocations.

As you indicate, a major feature of the budget agreement was the elimination of any provisions that were revenue losers. Unfortunately, this included a number of items that we strongly support, like the 861-8 compromise.

The alternative, however, was to open the package to a long list of expense items with additional taxes to cover the cost. The list of such items was close to $3 billion, a totally unacceptable sum.

We are still supporting the 861-8 provisions and hope they might be addressed in the future. As you are probably aware, the chances are high that there will be a technical corrections bill sometime early next year.

Thank you for your interest.

Dear Dr. Hachohen:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter of November 12 concerning the status of the city of Jerusalem and the PLO Observer Mission to the United Nations in New York. I, too, treasure the bond of friendship between the United States and Israel and appreciate the value of our alliance.

For three decades, the U.S. position has been that Jerusalem must be undivided, that its final status must be resolved through peaceful negotiation, and that the outcome of such negotiations should not be prejudged by the unilateral action of any party. Accordingly, the U.S. Embassy remains in Tel Aviv, pending a negotiated resolution of Jerusalem's status.

Its ultimate status is not an isolated problem but part of the entire complex of issues in the Arab-Israeli dispute. Our overriding goal in the Middle East is a comprehensive, just, and lasting peace ensuring the security and independence of all countries in the region. To that end, since 1978 the United States has participated in negotiations with Egypt and Israel, and we continue to seek ways to move the peace process forward.

President Reagan's September 1982 peace initiative is directed toward a solution which recognizes the legitimate rights and just requirements of the Palestinian people and ensures the security of Israel. The United States seeks to expand negotiations under the Camp David framework to include the Palestinians and those Arab states prepared to pursue the cause of peace.

On the subject of the PLO and its Observer Mission to the United Nations in New York, the United States has long criticized the PLO for its ties to international terrorism. But I do not believe that closure of the Observer Mission is an effective vehicle for expressing our shared concerns regarding terrorism and the PLO. Closure of the mission would break a 40-year practice regarding observer missions by nations hosting U.N. bodies and could legitimately be viewed as inconsistent with our responsibilities under sections 11-13 of the United Nations Headquarters Agreement. The fulfillment of our obligations under the Agreement is important to our relationship to the United Nations and its member states. I believe it would be unwise to violate those obligations, even with respect to organizations such as the PLO.

I say this particularly because the United Nations could be expected to refer the issue to the World Court, where we would probably lose and the PLO would reap a propaganda gain. It is not in our interests -- or, ultimately, in Israel's -- to allow such a consequence, however unintended, of action against the PLO.

Be assured, the President is steadfast in his determination to continue strengthening U.S. friendship with Israel. As President Reagan told President Chaim Herzog during his November State Visit, "The United States will always ensure Israel's security and work with her in partnership for peace."

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Dear Jack:

Doris sent me your letter, and I have gone into it at some length. Regretfully, I find that there is a Federal statute, specifically Title 5 of the U.S. Code, which prohibits the President and members of his immediate staff from trying to use political influence to obtain or maintain career employment of candidates. I am sure you will understand the problem it would cause if I tried personally to intervene. However, I think Raymond should continue to pursue his efforts with the postal department. And if he is interested in some other agencies of the Federal government in the region, I suggest that he contact William E. Flynn III, who is Regional Director of the U.S. Office of Personnel Management, 75 Spring Street, S.W., Atlanta, Georgia 30303. I cannot be sure that that would produce a result, but it is perhaps worth his effort.

I am sorry to learn that you are going to vacate the office of County Executive of Campbell County, especially for health reasons. You have done a splendid job, you have been a good friend, and you have been good for the area. Good luck in the future.

Dear Mr. Majewski:

Thank you for your message to Senator Baker.

I understand your frustration, and I regret that the material you sent to the President was damaged. There are procedures in place designed to prevent such occurrences but, even in the best of circumstances, errors do happen because of the volume and variety of material sent to the White House each day.

For your information, we generally discourage people from sending items of a personal or valuable nature to the White House with requests. It is better to make the request and then send the material under separate cover if the request is approved.

As you requested, I have contacted the Postal Service concerning an "Inauguration Day" envelope to replace yours which was damaged in handling here. They have informed me that those envelopes are no longer available.

Dear William:

Thank you for your letter of November 30 concerning the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) and a petition from Howes Leather Company concerning cut-to-pattern leather soles.

As you know, Howes Leather Company has petitioned the Executive branch agencies to recommend to the President that he remove the duty-free treatment being afforded to cut-to-pattern leather soles under the GSP program. This program, which is administered by the Office of the United States Trade Representative, is designed to promote the economic development of designated beneficiary developing countries by offering temporary duty-free treatment on some 3,000 articles. Virtually all of our developed country trading partners have similar programs.

The Howes petition is currently under review. We expect to make a decision on this matter within the next couple of months. The Office of the United States Trade Representative (USTR) has assured me that your views will be carefully considered as they prepare recommendations for the President.

Should you have any additional questions on the Howes Leather petition or the GSP program in general, please do not hesitate to contact the GSP Information Center at (202) 395-6971. I also want to thank you for your kind words.

Dear Bill:

Thank you for your December 3 letter. Both your recommendation of the Report of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and SALT II Treaty mark-up and your pledge of support are deeply appreciated.

I agree with your assessment of the work done on the SALT II Treaty by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. I have commended it to the staff working on Senate ratification of the INF Treaty.

As you might expect, we are quite proud of the accomplishments the INF Treaty represents, such as the strength of the NATO alliance, acceptance of asymmetrical reductions, and an agreement to short-notice and permanent on-site inspections. We are also quite pleased by the wide support the Treaty has received among our European allies and here at home. Your support will be helpful as we move into the ratification process. I trust that you will stay in close touch as the hearings proceed.

Thank you once again.

Sincerely,

Howard H. Baker, Jr.

Dear Cardinal O'Connor:

Thank you for your recent letter recommending Mrs. Geraldine McGann for Administrator of Region II at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

While this is not a Presidential appointment, I understand that Mrs. McGann is under active consideration as Joseph Monticciolo's successor upon his retirement. A final decision has not yet been made by Secretary Pierce, but you can be certain that we have notified him of your support for Mrs. McGann's candidacy.

As always, I appreciate your recommendation.

Sincerely,

Howard H. Baker, Jr.

Dear Mr. Thompson:

Thank you for your letter to Senator Baker requesting a congratulatory letter for Doris Dwyer and Michael Noonan on their upcoming marriage.

Senator Baker would be pleased to send a letter, but in order to do so we would like to have an address for the inside of the letter.

When you provide us with that information, we would then forward the letter to you so that you may incorporate it in the album you are preparing.

Sincerely,

Barbara Riegner
